Sullivan West Central School District was created in 1999 by the merger of the Narrowsburg, Delaware Valley, and Jeffersonville-Youngsville Central School Districts, today our district spreads over 250 square miles of woods, streams, farmland and mountains, and enrolls 1200 students.

The Sullivan West Central School District is positioned between the Catskill high peaks to the east and the Delaware River Valley that forms our western boundary. Ours is an area of rare and quiet natural beauty, containing some of the finest golf, fishing, hunting, hiking, and skiing. New York City is only 90 miles away. Our School District is home to fine music, art, museums, and first-class restaurants. The 1969 Woodstock Festival occurred in the Town of Bethel, one of the eight towns served by the Sullivan West schools.

The Sullivan West Central School District provides an excellent education for its students within a small-town, rural community setting. Its schools are great places for students, faculty and staff. Maybe this explains why Sullivan West graduates are so successful.
